L.O: We are learning to retell a story.

For days and days and weeks and weeks the sun did not stop shining on the Kenyan village where Lila lived. It was too hot for Lila's village to get food and water. The sun is so hot for Lila and her village. It was too hot to collect firewood, it was too hot to weed the crops and it was too hot to milk the cows. One night Lila heard her mother say it about the dry well. That the water that had dried up in the well with no water with no crops and with no milk there will be no life. Lila wanted so much for the rain to come. One day Lila's grandfather told Lila the secret of rain.
