We are learning to manipulate grammar for the reader.

Children should learn about war because it is an important piece of history that belongs to their country. Although it might give them a false idea of starting fights. They might believe that war is a terrible thing and will eventually stop fighting. Teachers will tell the children the horrifying facts that will make them stop and they will understand what soldiers <sup>have</sup> <sup>done</sup> and how they gave their lives.

On the other hand, others may believe that it is wrong that children should learn about war because of the nature of ~~war~~ of war such as <sup>sp</sup> racism, killing, death and murder might make them feel uncomfortable and disturbed. The majority of children may <sup>sp</sup> experience nightmares and parents will complain.

This book should have pictures because children might be visual learners. ~~It~~ might pictures will develop the understanding of the war it's self because children can visualize what is happening and they might not understand the language being used.
