We are learning to integrate dialogue.

The moon and the heavenly nectar.

When the sky was black with no world there was a god (Vishnu) who created the world by yelling "Rah!" and a ~~big~~ gigantic sphere popped out of nowhere and all the gods and demons rushed to get a ~~good~~ great spot in the universe. Giant sappires, rubies, diamonds and emerald were jumping out of milky oceans, ~~on~~ seas, lakes and rivers. Out of the churning also came the heavenly nectar of immortality and poison. Shiva drank the poison and his neck turned blue and looks like the blue wings of a shining butterfly. The gods started a row and began fighting.

The gods started a row over who gets the nectar. "The gods need it to protect the earth." Vishnu^m demanded.

"Well I think demons should!" Shouted Rahu (Who Vishnu thought was a god).

"Vishnu I think your assistant Rahu is a demon because he thinks Demons should get the nectar!" Shiva ~~said~~ Roared loudly.

"That's right I am a demon." Raha mumbled long after Vishnu went.

"Vishnu, Vishnu!" Cried Shiva

"Gather everyone tonight Shiva!" replied Vishnu.

Vishnu went at the strike of midnight and when the last bell rang he ran and ran until he finally reached the meeting point and he ~~at~~ replied to ~~needed~~ a discussion so he said
